Boudica

Boudica was born around 30 CE into the Iceni tribe of eastern Britain. Roman writers later described her as tall, red-haired and fierce, yet she first grew up riding ponies across lowland marshes, learning herbal remedies from elders. She married Prasutagus, king of the Iceni, who accepted Roman rule after the invasion of 43 CE.

Rome allowed him to keep his throne and weapons in return for taxes and cavalry support. Boudica shared power, led religious festivals and oversaw weaving workshops that turned local wool into plaid cloaks. Two daughters completed the royal household. Although contact with Rome brought glass beads and new ploughs, it also seeded resentment, for the Iceni paid heavy tribute while watching foreign soldiers march their roads.
